1. Building No 6 e of Installation I a in Strausberg housed the SSD (State Security Service) office. [redacted] the Headquarters Administrative Agency XI [redacted] 25X1
2. Lieutenant Schreier (fnu), adjutant of chief of staff. Rooms No 311 to 316, 329 to 337 and 110 housed the central manuals administration. [redacted] 25X1
[redacted] this agency was scheduled to move to building No 9 at an undetermined date.
3. On the first floor of building No 3, room No 117 was provided for Lieutenant General Vincenz Mueller, chief of staff, and room No 107 for Mueller's Soviet adviser. Under an economy program, room No 207 on the second floor, which was provided for Lieutenant General Hoffmann and room No 204, also on the second floor, which was to be allocated to Hoffmann's Soviet adviser, were scheduled to be partitioned in an effort to obtain more space and to diminish excessive luxury concerning which objections had been raised. It was planned now that the two rooms should be partitioned only by a light wooden wall which might be removed at any time. The Soviet adviser gave his consent to this measure since a number of rooms was allegedly to be needed shortly. With regard to the expensive construction of the building as a whole, however, he expressed his disapproval in an unequivocal way.

4.  Comment. The offices of Lieutenant General Hoffmann (~~fnu~~) and Lieutenant General Vincenz Mueller are presently still located in building No 6 a. The objections raised by Ulbricht against the luxurious construction of building No 3 has apparently borne fruit since originally, two rooms - Nos 206 and 207 - had been provided for Lieutenant General Hoffmann and another two rooms - Nos 204 and 205 - for the Soviet adviser
